VIGOROUS D. A. R. BATTLE IS BEGUN

Willis. "I wish to see the society reap the benefit of publishing this record Hundreds of persons would gladly buy it.
If it is given to the Library of Congress it is lost to us forever. And the Library of Congress has given no assurance that it will publish the records." One of the Story party insisted there was a professional genealogist in the ranks of the D. A. R., who was particularly anxious to have the manuscript presented to the Library of Congress so that she could use the records to sell genealogies to women desiring to become members of the society.
When the vote finally came, not a single Daughter voted in favor of the administration report which was offered by Mrs. Jones. Mrs. Scott, the president general, who is up for re-election and is being opposed by Mrs. Story, seemed bewildered at the vote, and asked twice in vain for the "nays."

At the White House.

At the White House.

The Daughters were received at the White House yesterday afternoon by the President and Mrs. Tatt. Long before the hour of the reception the line out-side the east entrance formed and extended around Pennsylvania avenue to Another Clash Occurs.

Another clash between the Scott and Story factions came over the report of the chairman of the magazine committee. Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey. Mrs. Mussey recommended that the D. A. R. mage 6.22 zine be published by an outsider instead 6.17 of by the society. The Storyites objected 6.08 and a debate followed, in which the Daughters tolked of figures and debits 6.00 and credits and cash balances until nearly everybody's head was swimming.

Mrs. Mussey finally tried to prove to Mrs. George T. Smallwood that she was mixed on her figures, but finally found herself all tangled in the columns of the treasurer general's report, and admitted she had not seen the report until yesterday in that form. This caused a mild sensation, and Mrs. Smallwood took the opportunity to move that the report be laid over until a definite and clear statement of just how much the magazine and the publication of the proceedings of the congress had cost. The adoption of this amendment, which carried the matter over till to-morrow morning, was laided as a victory for the Story party.

Dr. Franklin Jameson, director of the department of historical research of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, addressed the Daughters on the question of what kind of historical work the society as an organization might approciety as an organization might approday in that form. This caused a mild clety as an organization might appro printely engage in.

Although tense with excitement, the session last night was orderly and no pyrotechnics occurred. In general, only outine reports from standing committees were submitted, and adopted without par-

Gave Complete Report,

Mrs. Edwin S. Garner, chairman of the committee on children of the republic gave one of the most interesting and com-plete reports. When Mrs. Garner said these clubs were doing better work than the organization of Boy Scouts, she was given a great ovation.

Other papers were read by Mrs. D. E. R. Keller, Mrs. Edward Orton, jr., Mrs. William Lawson Peel, and Mrs. George William Lawson Peel, and Mrs. George M. Sternberg.

The greatest ovation was given Mrs. J. M. Dickinson, wife of the Secretary of War, who reported on the movement being carried on to have a law passed by Congress concerning the desecration of the flag and providing a heavy penalty for such. She said she had every reason to believe legislation would be affected in the near future covering the case, but that "mere woman" could not do much in the way of persuading Congressmen to be in a big hurry. Mrs. Scott introduced

On account of illness, Mrs. A. E. Patton chairman of the committee on a national university, was unable to be present. Mrs. Donald McLean, supplied her place.

Mrs. Donald McLean, supplied her place, but did not go into details. The congress will be called to order this morning at 10 o'clock. Rev. Dr. John R. Shannon, pastor of the Metro-politan M. E. It was announced by the house committee that not one member of the public will be admitted to the hall to-day while the election of officers is being held. In their desire to obtain a seat for every voter, the Daughters have determined to exclude spectators, who might crowd out the accredited delegates.
